Essential acute dermatology for General Physicians and GPs

Tuesday 23 September 2008

Educational aims & objectives:

The aim of this meeting is to discuss the diagnosis and management of acute dermatological problems at the primary-secondary care interface.

The emphasis will be on conditions that may initially present from general practice to acute medical receiving units, and the main focus will be the requirement for referral, diagnosis and differential diagnosis, and the early management and investigation. Some new drugs in skin disease will also be discussed, especially where these may have side effects that are relevant to physicians outside dermatology.

Participants should gain an understanding of diagnosis, differential diagnosis and (where appropriate) causes of a range of acute dermatological problems.

The meeting should give guidance on the reasons for referral of selected disorders, and the preliminary or important investigations that may be required. Participants should also learn about some of the more common causes of treatment-related problems, both skin reactions to systemic drugs and general medical problems of some dermatology drugs.
